- I am not sure if there is a gap. I am just frustrated much of the time.
- I don't have a gap. I have people who lack "common sense."

Self-Improvement, growth and change are important to me.

- I get energized by improving my approach to business, and enjoy receiving objective, constructive feedback.
- To succeed, I am willing to address, change or stop self-defeating behaviors.
- I am not sure that change and growth are what I need to achieve my ideal business
- I believe that improvement for myself is not as important as improvement of others in my business.

I am willing to do the work required to get me where I want to go.

- Yes, and I will devote the necessary time to move forward quickly.
- I need to clarify what 'my work' is and what work I can delegate to others.
- I am concerned about repeating work on my business which, I believe, I have already completed.

I have the motivation and support to devote a contracted length of time to working ON my business with a coach.

- Yes. I know that coaching is not a 'quick fix', and at this point a commitment to change is stronger than my need to be doing the day to day work of my business.
- Family and other company leaders support the coaching concept for my business and agree that it is a viable approach for business growth and development.
- I am ready to change my present 'way of leading' my business, willing to be held accountable for staying focused, but am concerned about length of time it might take.
- I need to clarify the benefits of the time spent with a business coach.
